The foreign community in this unprotected settlement, and without a gunboat of any nationality in port, calmiy waited the result, sloop being impossible to most of the residents." The description of the precautions taken by the Chinese is calculated to provoke a smile, but the condition of affairs in Hankow and its neighbourhood is evidently a very serious one. It does not appear that the disorderly tendency has its origin in any anti-foreign feeling, but, in the event of an insurrection breaking out the position of the foreigners would be by no means a pleasant one. In each and all of these diverse characters Mrs. Bernard powers of the highest order, such as are rarely attained by an amateur. The piece selected for the farewell performance was Oliver Goldsmith's charming comedy of "She Stoops to Conquer." Mrs. Bernard.long ago conquered the theatre going public of Hongkong, and when she made her appearance on the stage last night as Miss Hardcastle she was warmly received; throughout the ledge of her part which is essential to easy sur piece she carried the audience with her, and when she uttered the following lines from the epilo-

"Bhe Stoops to Conquer," like many another classic, is known to many more by name than by actual acquaintance, and to some of our readers a slight sketch of the plot may not be unwelcome. The play is a genuine comedy, in which humour predominates to the exclusion of all sickly sentiment. From beginning to end theandience is never called upon to shed tears, but is kept in a state of genuine amusement. "Fashione in dramatic literature may come and go," says Black in his volume on Goldsmith in the "English Men of Letters " series, "but the wholesome, goodnatured fun of 'She Stoops to Conquer' is as capable of producing a hearty laugh now as when it first saw the light in Covent Garden," comedy, which was an immense-success on its first presentation, has held its place on the English stage for more than a century, and is likely to hold it as long as the stage survives. Tony Lumpkin. A fine opportunity for the display of histrionic ability was also afforded in the part of Mrs. Hardcastle, but while Mrs. Cheryan gave a capital presentment of the doting mother and avarious aunt, she was bardly up to her usual mark. This no doubt > natural acting. Like all Mrs. Bernard's impersonations, ber Kete Hardcastle was perfectly natural and life like. The self-possession with which in her own obserseteres Miss Hardcastle shepinned the luckless Martow to an un willing this de thie, the mingled coyness and audacity with which she met him disguised as a bar-maid; and the archness and tact with which she later led him on to ayow his love were all simply admirable, and showed the grace of a born actress. The screen scene was especially loudly appleaded, the discomfiture of Sir Charles Marlow expiting much marriment. The role of sustained by Mrs. Fraser, who acted with care never having missed anything before.

was owing to the fact of recent indisposition which prevented her acquiring that perfect know-

His suppressed fory when approaching young Marlow with the words-'Mr. Marlow, your servant. I'm your very humble servant" was finely simulated, his final outburst of rage, when asked by his great for his bill was a picture to behold. This gentleman has previous occasions proved bimself an actor of no mean power, and he gave a very fair, though rather unequal representation of Marlow. He was stronger, we think, in the opening scenes; he seemed to lack "go!" in the love-making episodes, and was hardly andible in two or three passages. Mr. Kidman made his first appearance on the local stage last night in the character of Hastings. He interpreted it very well, and spoke updistinctly. On the whole it was a highly oredit: able first appearance, and we can congratulate Amsteur Dramatic Corps on this acdession to their strength. Mr. Lookwood, in the part of Sir Charles Marlow, gave a thoroughly realistic impersonation of that fond parent, and quite upheld the reputation he made for himself on his appearance as the Professor in "School." The minor of Stingo, the landlord of the Three Pigeons, was filled by Mr. Laurie; that of Diggory by Mr. Sethom; that of Roger by Mr. Life; and that of Jeremy, Marlow's servant, by Mr. Patteson. SUPREME COURT. 25th September.

SUMMARY JURISDICTION. SEFORE MR. JUSTICE ROSSELL

TAUFER V. RIBETRO, $39. Mr. Holmes appeared for the plaintiff. The claim was for ront. The defendant had paid $20 into court, but disputed the remainder of the claim. The plaintiff is the owner of houses Nos. 10, 14, and 16. Mosque-street. The defendant formerly o capied No. 10: He afterwards wished to move into No. 16, and to take No. 14 for his mother. Repairs and alterations were to be made in the houses, but the plaintiff said these were quite unnecessary and were merely made, in compliance with defendant's wishes. One of the houses was vacant while under repair for a whole month, and for this the plaintiff claimed $13 rent. The remaining $6 is dispute was with reference to the other house, occupied by defendant's mother. Repairs were going on there during the month, and defendant said only half-the-house was occupied, waid the whole house was occupied and he claimed

Having heard the evidence, his Lordship held that the whole of the last named house was occupied, ami that defendant must pay the full rent, but with regard to the other one, he said it was absurd to charge rent for a bouse until it was habitable. He accordingly gave julgment or the plaintiff for $5 in addition to the $20

OSSIAN'S SONG OF SORBOW IN HIS OLD AGE A FRAGMENT. Six childless men were we, who po'er thought harm A brave and blameless life we lived alway But one of us seen slept beneath the calcu: Remembering him this hight, I'm sad and was.

Five were we now, five warriors of renown; Woe to the for that dared to beard us then ! Death oame again, as he had come before-Another here vanished from our ken.

We then were four, bunting the forest free; Fair were the aims our good right hands did wield But even valor saves not from all scaith-Another warrier fell on battle-field. We then were three, far famed for valorous deeds, Bards o'er their harps sang of our foats the while; The sun pursued its course from east to west, ". We lost another chief withouten guiles We two then sat upon the green hill-side,

(From all we love we're fated still to part); Insutiable Death, unlooked-for, came again, And took the sole companion of my heart. Sad and alone, the last of that brave band, Remembering other years, I sit and mourn 'Tie fated we must die, but still 'tie sad To go the journey whence shall none return.

The last put I-the gest are fallon and gono-About to fall. I tromble in the breeze That, wandering thre' the woods, makes corio moan The last tree of the elump upon the hill;

Of the nut-cluster on the hazel bough,

Sapless and withered, I stand all alone; All that I loved are gone, and suon must I Fall, like my leaves that on the earth are strown Sholto bold, and Gorrie brave, and Gaul "And Oscar fleet of foot and fair of skin.
